PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE by Bill Logan

Well, it's been along and hard winter, with record snow falls and cold temperatures.

Vince Sibona: is your 1st Vice President and also chairs the membership Committee, This year Vince and John Kleban represented the VHFC at the Southern Ocean Count High School Fishing club flea market, they manned our table and gave out club applications along with raffle tickets for a chance to win a free one year membership for new members only.

The VHFC Board has been hard at work this winter making preparations for the upcoming season. We are going into the year without a full contingency of officers, so the board is looking for some help and new faces.

John Kleban has been very busy our VHFC web site. It looks great and has loads of information, along with club pictures, fishing reports, Club info, and much, much more. Please take the time to visit at www.VHFCclub.com. Don't over look the feed back section. John has done a great job maintaining the web site along with his other responsibilities.

Again Bill Dabney has done a good job in getting speakers for 2010. April guest speaker will be Capt Fran Verdi – giving valuable information on spring stripers and blues. Bill has other speakers lined up for this year so watch for your monthly VHFC newsletter. Bill also takes care of the club library and has some very helpful books and videos to loan.

Please note: Keeping with our schedule from last year we will be starting the speakers' presentation at 8:00 PM, and we will conduct our Club business afterward. So remember, get there early and grab a good seat, this should be a great presentation.

Dave Sikorski is our JCAA/Regulatory representative and keeps us up to date on what is happening with regulations. Dave is still working full time and has to travel a lot and does a great job in balancing his work. Look further in this newsletter for Dave's up dates.

John Kleban is our weigh master and also has the responsibility of the fishing awards, plus John has some new award programs, so watch for what John has to say.

Don't forget about the 2010 Captain Melanie Boytos Award.

Ray Williams: Is our publisher and newsletter editor, thanks to Ray for a great job.

The fluke regulations have been set for the upcoming season. The bag limit will be 6 fish at 18 inches with a season from May 29 to Sept 6, same as last year. Not too bad, in my opinion, all things considered. At least the size limit didn't increase, and I think we can all live with the slightly shorter season and the drop from 8 to 6 fish.

I would like to take a minute to remind everyone to please support our club sponsors. In these tough economic times, even though you may save a few pennies by making your purchases at one of the "Big Box Stores" please support our club sponsors. It is the local "Mom & Pop" shops, the ones that have supported our fishing club, that need our support now more than ever!

One of our sponsors has moved to a new and bigger location. The Chum Bucket owned by Skip Deckman has moved just a few doors North of where he was, and says he is all moved in and ready to serve you.

I am looking forward to the upcoming year at the VHFC. It should be exciting and very rewarding. Remember this is YOUR club. Please, come to the meetings, enjoy the guest speakers, and most importantly, get involved.

RFA PRESS RELEASE--IS RECREATIONAL FISHING BEING BANNED? by Dave Sikorski

A recent national opinion piece has ignited a firestorm this week concerning the efforts of the Obama Administration's Interagency Ocean Policy Task Force and its involvement in implementing a policy of "marine spatial planning" that could ultimately effect the management of and public access to the nation's natural public resources. The column comes three weeks after the closing of the public comment period by the Presidential task force and on the heels of the historic fishermen's rally at the Capitol on February 24 coordinated by the Recreational Fishing Alliance (RFA) and its allied groups.

Recent press releases issued by some sport fishing industry and angling conservation groups have expressed dismay at the unwillingness of administrators to listen to their recommendations. None of this comes as a surprise to the RFA. More troubling is that some of these same insiders have shown a willingness under past administrations to accept use of executive privilege in managing coastal access while fruitlessly participating in the new administration's new bureaucratic task force process.

"The goal of the key players in the process, specifically the Pew Environment Group and its minions, is to attempt to implement through Executive Order what they had failed to accomplish through the legislative process," said Jim Donofrio, RFA Executive Director. "We welcome those organizations who feel disenfranchised by the task force to join us in working to prevent what is the usurpation of the management of this nation's fisheries, oceans, coastal waters and the Great Lakes for ideological reasons," Donofrio said.

The Interagency Ocean Policy Task Force led by the White House Council on Environmental Policy was established by President Obama on June 12, 2009. According to the Presidential memorandum, the task force was charged with developing a national policy for the protection, maintenance and restoration of U.S. oceans, coasts and the Great Lakes. "It will also recommend a framework for improved stewardship and effective coastal and marine special planning," the White House said in June.

The same month the task force was established, Donofrio was invited to testify before congress in opposition to legislation sponsored by California Democrat Rep. Sam Farr (H.R. 21), a bill which would establish a new national policy for our oceans. In a release issued last fall, Donofrio said the RFA was unnerved by glaring similarities of the new report and Rep. Farr's H.R. 21, the Ocean Conservation, Education, and National Strategy for the 21st Century Act (aptly referred to as Oceans 21). "This appears to be an attempt by the Executive branch to circumvent the established legislative process and enact policy that failed as legislation 5 years in a row," Donofrio said, adding "RFA believes enacting laws through Executive order and proclamation sets a dangerous precedence."

Oceans 21 has failed to gain Congressional support because of its ability to restrict access to public resources while creating a new bureaucratic hierarchy with unprecedented power to regulate fisheries and implement ocean zoning without oversight or public input. The RFA has been in the forefront of exposing Oceans 21 and is a leader in preventing its passage. On June 18, 2009, the RFA was the only national fishing organization that testified before Congress in opposition of the bill

"Recreational fishermen have been watching fisheries management in this country literally get hijacked by preservationists," Donofrio said this week in response to the national news headlines indicating the president was going to ban recreational fishing. "I don't think this president would consider banning recreational fishing outright, but it's clear to us that the Obama Administration would like to severely restrict recreational fishing." Donofrio said RFA and others are troubled by the number of staffers within the Administration who have direct ties to Pew.

RFA said the good part about the recent headlines is that people are opening their eyes to the fact that "the fisheries management system is broken" and in need of repair. "Are we concerned about realities regarding the task force? Yes we are, and that's the hijacking of H.R. 21, a bill that would set up such an incredible bureaucratic infrastructure that Americans would indeed have a hard time finding fishing opportunities," Donofrio said.

Records show that groups like Pew and the David & Lucille Packard Foundation have used funds to support implementation of marine protected areas, denying public access to large areas of coastal waters. "Years ago, Pew and Packard had a dream of creating blanket marine reserves across the country through the legislative process, but that quickly fell apart when Congress wouldn't support it so they moved into the states," Donofrio said. "True, they found certain governments like California very supportive of efforts to institute blanket closures, but they never gave up their goal of getting us all off the water by whatever means possible," he said. Donofrio explained that Pew-funded groups worked hard to push rigid "overfishing" language into the Magnuson Stevens Act during the 2006 reauthorization debate

"Essentially, Pew was able to create these de facto reserves which make fishing opportunities so incredibly hard. Take for example red snapper and other important snapper/grouper which are off limits to recreational anglers in the south Atlantic despite rebuilding progress," Donofrio said. "Pew's stacked the task force deck, and they've even got one of their Pew Fellowship award-winners as head of the fisheries service, it's certainly troubling."

Dr. Jane Lubchenco, who the President appointed to run NOAA Fisheries in 2009, is also a past member of the Pew Oceans Commission, the steering committee of the Joint Oceans Commission Initiative, and a director of the Monterey Bay Aquarium, SeaWeb, and Environmental Defense all of which are Pew funding recipients. Dr. Lubchenco also serves as Trustee Emerita of the David and Lucile Packard Foundation.

"Dr. Luchenco currently sits atop a growing number of appointees who are pushing an agenda of ocean zoning, catch shares and Draconian regulatory actions that are severely hindering our ability to fish with resulting negative impacts on the economy and significant job losses," said Donofrio who pointed out that it's been this apparent "takeover of fisheries management" which led to the fishermen's rally in Washington DC on February 24 which drew an estimated crowd of over 4,000 fishermen in support of the Flexibility in Rebuilding American Fisheries Act (H.R. 1585 and S. 1255)

SRHS FISHING CLUB FLEA MARKET REPORT by Vince Sibona.

John Kleban and I had a successful day considering there was a lot less people that attended this year's flea market than in past years. We had about 90 raffle tickets filled out for the one year free membership drawing for April and we signed up one new member. We handed out the extra old newsletters we had leftover that I saved from last year and about 100 VHFC cards. Hopefully we get a good turnout for the April meeting from all of this. They have to be present at the April meeting to win. We told everyone to look up the VHFC web site.

Ciao,
Vince

FISHING REPORT by John Kleban

In 2008 the family took a trip to Alaska. One of the spots we were going to stop at was Icy Point. There were several trips for Halibut fishing being offered on the cruise ship. My son-in law and I decided to give it a try. Being too smart I decided that the first trip would be the best bet since they would probably have their most experienced skipper to have the first trip and the less experienced skippers catching the overflow. Well they did have the most experienced captain take out the first trip. He decided that he would never see us again so he very slowly motored out to the closest fishing grounds. We were half way there (about 4 miles) when the boats that left 20 minutes after us flew by. We went another 4 miles and started fishing. The other boats were out of sight since they were about 10 miles away. Looking into the bait bucket I saw only three strips of fresh bait and the rest looked old. I quickly grabbed the fresh bait and headed toward the bow. We were fishing in about 180 feet of water using 32 ounces of lead with 14/0 hooks and 60-pound line on a heavy rod with 6/0 reel. The water was dead calm and the drift was very slow. Using a very slow lift I had many bites but they kept dropping off. The other anglers just dropped the lines down and never checked if they were in touch with the bottom. Since we were drifting and they never let line out they were out of touch with the bottom very quickly. After about 20 minutes I hooked the first Halibut. Then the captain decided to anchor up to a preset buoy that was half way home. I was able to catch another Halibut. There were two other Halibut caught when each of the anglers need a rest room break and put their rod in the rod holder. Each angler is allowed

2 Halibut per day, with one under 28 inches and another over 28 inches. I gave both my Halibut away since I had tasted Halibut before and did not like the taste when my wife caught a 28 inch one in California a few years prior. The two fish were 27 inches and weighed in at 14 pounds at the dock. I was surprised that a fluke of that size would weigh-in at about 8 pounds. We were in at least a half hour before the other boats started to come. I checked them out at the dock and talked to the other anglers. On one boat all six anglers were hooked up once at the same time. They had caught about 30 Halibut with one weighed-in at 36 pounds. Well the other captains enjoyed fishing while the experienced captain treated as a business knowing he would never see any of the cruise ship passengers again.
